In association with Actors Theatre of Louisville, NEW VOICES PLAYWRITING @ WALDEN THEATRE is a class for young creative writers looking to gain insight and practice developing stories for the stage. Participants will write, read, share, and respond to work written in & out of class, with the goal of each student completing at least one 10-minute play.

The class also features an insider's look into Actors Theatre of Louisville, and this spring students get to experience first-hand three plays in the Humana Festival and get to meet creative staff involved in the festival, all at no additional cost.

Student plays will also be considered for Walden Theatre's Young Playwrights Festival, or to be developed and performed in Actors Theatre's New Voices Young Playwrights Festival. Student works selected for the New Voices Festival will also be published in the annual New Voices Anthology.
